The magnitude of the sum placed at neir disposal dazed the Commissionera, and it was only after a series of sharp reprimands from the Board of Estimate and Apportionment, that they were able to put any men to work.

The jobbery began at once. The Sicilian Asphalt Company was favored from the start with a series of orders, which need not be criticised, further than to say that Comptroller Pitch has refused to pay the bills. Exorbitant prices were paid for rock basting and the use of derricks. Gan, 8 of men were put on park work for the sole purpose of drawing a per diem. They were put there because they were handy on election day. The fact that Justice Divver had so many men under one foreman that it was called "Divver's gang," is notorious. Their work consisted in taking long walks and watching base-ball matches.

All this was to the exclusion of the honest man of family, for whom the money was intended—the men out of work.

Puzzling Phraseology of the America's Cup Deed of Gift.

America have foreseen the complications tempt to arrange a race for the trophy which they so ardently desired should forever remain a stimulus to interna-tional yacht racing, they would probably have taken the musty and inartistic piece of plate up into the forepeak of the trophy against any controversion, as they thought, these fearless and pairiotic old Vikings continued to be active Corinthians, earnestly hoping that they might live to see many international contest for the prized vase. Then, one by one, they died—all but one of their number having passed away before 1857. It was in that year that the New York Yacht Club, unmindful of its obligation to accept the custody of the cup upon the 'erms which those whose property it was, kicked the "forever" part of the agreement over the taffrail and "returned" the cup to George L. Schuyler, the surviving donor, with the understanding that he should draw up new conditions and again restore the trophy to the custody of the Club. It is this action which is now questioned in its legal aspect. It is held by many that the heirs of the four deceased shareholders should have been consulted in this arrangement.

However, the new "deed of gift" was drawn, and the cup returned to its glass case in the New York Yacht Club's house, where it continued to wear down the groove in the base of its standard, growing dimmer with its years of rest and apparently unappreciative of the important legislation its custody had provoked.

The new document stipulated that six months' notice be given, but inserted a clause providing that even that restriction be raised in favor of a mutual agreement clause.

Its principal alterations of the terms consisted in the provisions that but one vessel be sailed against the challenger, and that the latter proceed from her home port to the place of racing on her own bottom. Under this agreement the cup was contested for by General, in 1885. Again, in 1887, was the cup returned to the shades of the bluff old yachtamen who brought it to this country must have held a lively indignation meeting "over there."

An "instrument," indeed, is the new document. Of ten times the length of the agreement of 1857, full of seals and "party of the first part," and no mistake, it makes the cup the Club's actual property in the clause whic

The United States cruiser New York was fooded into the timber dry-dock at the Brooklyn Navy-Yard this morning. The New York can only foot in and out the dry-dock on extraordinary high tides, and then her keel clears the bottom by a few inches. She will be ready for sea service in a few days.
